Vision

Make food security a reality for every Colorado and Wyoming family.

40 YEARS FIGHTING HUNGER. FEEDING HOPE.

It's incredible how one dedicated and caring woman, Kathy Hackwith Groth, picked up bread in her Volvo in 1978 and launched the humble beginnings of what is today Food Bank of the Rockies. When Kathy toured the food bank this year, she expressed delight, seeing exactly the organization she envisioned forty years ago. You can read her story on page 10 of this report.

Over the past 40 years, we've relocated, remodeled and expanded our facilities, enhanced technology to advance logistics and warehousing, made it easier to donate, and improved how we and our partners serve our neighbors in need. We've experienced many changes. Our service area population grew. Our economy fluctuated. New supporters joined the fight. But through all these changes, hunger remains. So we keep on fighting, discovering new and better ways to nourish our community.

This fiscal year, we distributed a record number of meals through our warehouse – more than 145,000 each day. More than 23,000 volunteers shared their time and talent. More than 600 partner agencies worked with us to help families thrive. More than 30,000 donors supported our efforts. And more than ever, we need to keep feeding hope to more than 400,000 people in our service area facing hunger.

Food is a must. Nourishment gives children energy to grow. People who are sick have an opportunity to heal. Struggling families have a chance to get back on their feet. Food is the foundation for happy, healthy, thriving lives.

This year we wished a fond farewell to our long-time CEO, Kevin Seggelke, who retired in June. For 16 years, Kevin led the organization with integrity. Under his leadership, the food bank quadrupled the amount of food distributed and dollars raised. Distribution facilities in Denver, the Western Slope and Wyoming relocated to larger facilities and our Denver location remodeled to increase capacity for future growth. We're extremely grateful to Kevin for his years of service, dedication and support of our mission.

In early 2019, Erin Pulling became the new CEO of our organization. Erin comes to the food bank after a long tenure as CEO of Project Angel Heart, another well-respected hunger organization in Denver. We are excited to have her join us at Food Bank of the Rockies. As we prepare for her leadership, the coming year will be an opportunity to discover new ways to better help families thrive in the years to come.

In a perfect world, we envision everyone in our service area nourished, and hunger declared obsolete. Perhaps someday our vision will become reality, but today, we have work to do.

We're grateful to all who've supported us with food, time and funds these past 40 years. And we're extending advanced gratitude for continued support from our generous community as we grow and work together to solve hunger.

We're proud of what we've accomplished these last 40 years and excited to embrace change. Together we can work to ensure no child goes to school hungry, no older adult makes difficult choices between food and necessities, no one has to choose between food and medicine, and food security is a reality for all our neighbors.

With Sincere Appreciation,

Douglas Wilhelm, Board Chair

Dear Friends – a farewell message from former CEO Kevin Seggelke, who retired June 8, 2018

Time flies when you're a part of doing good works and I wanted to share a few memories that stand out most for me over my career.

During one of my first Food Bank of the Rockies experiences, serving dinner at a Kids Cafe, I'll never forget offering a little boy a second milk and how his eyes lit up. "You mean I can have more than one?" he exclaimed. It reminded me how many things I take for granted and how difficult it must be to live with hunger as a child.

During the Great Recession, I interviewed clients at a food pantry and met a man whose story will forever touch me. He worked for years as an electrician in Idaho Springs and his wife was a cosmetologist. They earned enough to feed their teenagers and even save a little. When the business he worked for closed, the family relocated to Aurora in hopes of a better chance to find work. While they searched for jobs, his wife developed breast cancer. Life became even more difficult as their savings depleted. Without an income, the family faced a dire situation. Tears streamed down his face as he told me, "I thought I did everything right. I never thought we'd be in this situation." I was struck by how quickly life can change and why it's so important to help feed struggling families.

Visiting a partner agency in Evergreen, I watched a pantry volunteer offer her client some extra ground beef. He thoughtfully told her one pound was plenty, and he wanted to ensure that others coming after him would also be fed. Even in his time of need, he was gracefully thinking of others.

I'd written several thank you notes over the years to a generous donor, Bud Ferdon. Bud wanted to ensure that his legacy lived on with a sizeable bequest to Food Bank of the Rockies. His kind gesture, and his family's selfless joy in seeing his gift honored with the naming of the Ferdon Family Fresh Food Center, was incredibly moving.

One of the highlights of my job was getting to know our wonderful volunteers, many of whom will forever be etched in my heart. Chuck came to help after he lost his job and he continued to help after he found work and into retirement. Betty Van Hook volunteered even while battling cancer (twice!) and her memory lives on through all the amazing volunteers given our award in her honor. I've been fortunate to receive support, counsel and expertise from our dedicated volunteer board members. I'm in awe of the countless individuals who roll up their sleeves – all of our volunteers are priceless! Because they care, we can do so much more!

Taking the helm, 16 years ago, I never dreamed we'd be able to distribute more than 50 million meals in a year's time. And now that dream is here. Many hands keep this large wheel turning to feed our community. I'm so proud to have been a spoke in this wheel. No one is irreplaceable and I take great comfort in knowing the wheel will continue to turn after I retire. Dedicated people working together – staff, volunteers, donors, partner agencies – bring hope to hungry men, women, and children. Thank you so much for your support!

Warm Regards and Much Gratitude,

Kevin

Vision and a Volvo Filled with Bread Launched Colorado's Largest Human Services Nonprofit

A big vision, and taking the first small steps to make it happen, can lead to exactly what you imagine.

When we began researching Food Bank of the Rockies' history to commemorate our 40th anniversary, we found a photocopy of a letter Governor Dick Lamm sent to Kathy Hackwith Groth, lauding her efforts to start the Colorado Food Clearing House. We wanted to locate Kathy and were excited to discover she was still right here in Metro Denver, volunteering at one of our partner agency pantries, and was willing to come by and share her memories about how Food Bank of the Rockies got started.

Kathy volunteered and coordinated food pantry efforts at Central Presbyterian Church in the early 1970s. After learning how much bread was wasted, she convinced grocery stores to give her day-old bread. There was so much of it, she began delivering bread to other food pantries all over town. Kathy packed the bread in her Volvo station wagon, and the seed for food banking in Colorado was planted.

"I learned that grocers could sell more bread if the racks were full, so they always had excess bread to throw away. They paid someone to slit the bag and pour bleach onto the bread," Kathy shared. She partnered with Senator Don McManus to pass Colorado's Good Samaritan Law, which protects establishments who donate food in good faith. Knowing they could donate food without the risk of being sued, retail and wholesale food distributors were encouraged to give more donations. This law was a game changer for hunger relief in Colorado, and is still a critical reason why the food bank and our partner agencies are able to safely rescue nearly 23 million pounds of food from retail stores that used to be thrown away.

The idea for Colorado Food Clearing House began when a full warehouse of pasta was about to be discarded. Kathy scrambled to network her fellow hunger relief workers and ensure all the pasta was picked up, but she knew there was a better way to prevent wasted food and feed hungry people. Trucks and resources were needed. Many others in the helping community worked with Kathy, brainstorming and networking. The result was a successful Federal grant application. With the grant money, the agency moved into a former Catholic school building at 34th and Pecos in Denver. Kathy and other nonprofits who occupied the building named it the Call to Action Building. A board of directors was recruited, and eventually an executive director was hired at a salary of $12,000 a year.

Kathy's vision, back in the late 1970s, was to eventually have a fleet of trucks, a large warehouse, and the resources to make sure food wasn't wasted and hungry people were fed. And her vision became a reality!

Taking time to care and do what feels right in your heart can make amazing things happen in the world. Thank you Kathy, for caring and doing something about food waste and hunger, and for continuing to care and feed the hungry today. You're an inspiration for what is, and for what is yet to come.

We're so proud of what we've accomplished together to solve hunger and amazed at how far we've come in 40 years. Who could have imagined that a Volvo station wagon filled with donated bread would grow into today's Food Bank of the Rockies, providing more than 145,000 meals a day to people in need? Kathy imagined. And we're so glad she did!

CONGRATULATIONS BOB KELLY, 2018 BETTY VAN HOOK AWARD WINNER!

Bob Kelly and Kevin Seggelke

Each year, we present the Betty Van Hook Memorial Award to one of Food Bank of the Rockies' outstanding volunteers who embodies Betty's zeal, passion and commitment to volunteer and support our mission. Bob Kelly received this honor as our 2018 winner.

Bob started volunteering at Food Bank of the Rockies ten years ago to make an impact on hungry kids and their families. You'll find Bob helping out with Totes of Hope® and other kids programs in our Nutrition Network on Tuesdays and Fridays.

"I enjoy helping others," Bob tells us. "It keeps me out of trouble!" Bob also shares that he's made wonderful lifelong friends by helping out at the food bank. "My team (Janet, Amber, Phil, Zach, and Jim) is the best!"

We're so grateful for Bob's service to our mission and proud to present him with this award. At the time of the award presentation, Bob had shared nearly 1,600 hours with us – and because of his gift of time, countless families have food on their tables.

Thank you Bob for all you do to help us fight hunger and feed hope!

THANK YOU VOLUNTEERS!

Every gift we receive helps us distribute food to people in need. We thank every donor for helping our mission and making a difference. We wish we could list you all because your gifts are vital to solving hunger. This report lists donors giving $2,500 or more and food donors who've contributed 10,000 pounds or more. We acknowledge that every gift, no matter how large or small, helps us feed families. Every dollar helps us provide four meals for our neighbors who might otherwise find their pantries and refrigerators empty. We honor each and every donor and extend our deepest gratitude for your gifts to our hungry neighbors.

Denver's Table program is created to distribute surplus prepared food from restaurants and deliver it to agencies serving on-site meals.

1996

To serve the growing need on the Western Slope, the food bank rents trailers and drives over the Rockies twice each month, delivering 60,000 pounds of food to 15 agencies.

1998

The first Joe Sakic Celebrity Classic at Sanctuary raises $140,000 to fight childhood hunger. Mix100 hosts its first Charity Marathon with Dom and Jane. The food bank leases warehouse space on the Western Slope.

1990

Food Bank of the Rockies goes electronic, using computers to control inventory and distribution. The development department is created to spearhead our first capital campaign.

1994

With generous support of the Denver Rustlers, Food Bank of the Rockies opens its first Kids Cafe, where meals are served to children at risk of hunger. The food bank distributes more than 10 million pounds of food for the first time.

1997

Food Bank of the Rockies joins sister food banks across the country to participate in the first nationwide hunger study. The study results shatter stereotypes. We learn more than half the families receiving help work, and children make up almost 50% of those who receive our food.

2006

Food Bank of the Rockies moves to nourish a growing need. The new warehouse at 10700 E. 45th Avenue provides 106,000 square feet of much needed space. Totes of Hope® launches, distributing weekend food totes to kids in low-income areas.

2008

2007

Thanks to the generosity of the Gary Magness Family Foundation donation of one million dollars, the food bank is one step closer to owning the new facility outright. This contribution is still the largest single gift in the history of the organization. In gratitude, the facility is renamed The Magness Family Distribution Center.

2009

Food Bank of the Rockies and partner agency Father Woody's Haven of Hope are featured on Good Morning America as part of a story about Feeding America and hunger relief. KBCO Studio C selects the food bank as a new beneficiary for their CD sales.

2010

The food bank exceeds 30 million pounds distributed. Notable visitors to the food bank include the band One Republic and Senator Mark Udall. In September 2010, the food bank launches our first mobile pantry to aid rural hunger. Soon to follow, mobile pantries visit urban areas where more help is needed.

2012

Food Bank of the Rockies surpasses 40 million pounds distributed. Congresswoman Diana DeGette visits the food bank to volunteer and learn about hunger. Bellco contributes $100,000 to help our Western Slope branch launch their dehydrator program. The food bank partners with 9Cares Colorado Shares to help distribute the largest food drive in the state.

2011

NFL Hall of Famer, Terrell Davis, visits a mobile pantry distribution. Shortly thereafter, the food bank becomes a Flagship Community Partner of the Denver Broncos.

2013

The Kung Food Fighters Kids Club launches. The Western Slope branch relocates to a larger facility in Palisade.

2014

Food Bank of the Rockies distributes more than 50 million pounds. Working with sister Feeding Colorado food banks, they help pass the Charitable Crop Donation Act to provide our agricultural donors with a tax credit.

2017

The food bank exceeds 60 million pounds distributed. The product mix includes more than 25% fresh produce. Our fleet of 24 trucks reaches the moon in miles driven every 236 days - more than 370,000 miles logged a year.

2015

The food bank completes a major remodel and adds capacity for 40% more food, a new area for more streamlined volunteer workspace, additional offices and more refrigerators and freezers. All facilities pass an AIB Good Manufacturing Practices inspection.

2018

Food Bank of the Rockies commemorates 40 years fighting hunger and feeding hope. More than 53 million meals are distributed to hungry families through direct service programs and partner agencies.

FOOD BANK OF THE ROCKIES'

MILLION MEALS CLUB

We are delighted to recognize our contributors who have shown tremendous dedication to the fight against hunger, year after year. Food Bank of the Rockies' Million Meals Club is an amazingly generous group of supporters who have contributed enough food and/or funds over the lifetime of their relationship with us to provide one million meals for our neighbors in need and continue to actively support our mission.

Whatever the next 40 years bring, with your help, we'll continue to strive for excellence and find the best ways to nourish our neighbors in need.

We cannot thank you enough for all you do to support this important cause!
